Kimberly-Clark Donates Thousands of Nappies To Bosnia

The Barton plant of Kimberly-Clark, one of the leading global health and hygiene companies, is supporting children in Bosnia by donating nearly 200,000 nappies through the Balkan Aid Relief Foundation.

The nappies are destined for needy families and orphanages throughout Bosnia and will be taken on a convoy of vehicles on a gruelling four-and-a-half day journey in February 2008.

Charlie Johnston, a volunteer with the Balkan Aid Relief Foundation, said: "The convoy of between six to nine vehicles and trailers which will leave the UK in February will be used entirely to transport the Kimberly-Clark nappies. The Bosnian Project Manager who helps us organise the deliveries when we reach the country was overwhelmed that Kimberly-Clark has donated so much."

"The children are in desperate need of nappies, so the donation is absolutely fantastic," he added.

Pete Outwin, Mill Manager of the Barton plant said: "We are glad that we can support BARF and more importantly children in need in Bosnia."

As one of the world's leading health and hygiene companies, Kimberly-Clark is committed to improving the well-being of people around the globe. This commitment is reflected in Kimberly-Clark's ongoing effort to pursue sustainable business practices that protect the environment, conserve natural resources and serve the need of its employees, retail partners, consumers and communities.
